Editorial

It is easy sometimes, as one looks back to four years spent more or less within the protecting boards of Milbank fence, to think of Barnard as separate and complete in itself, and to forget the bigger Columbia community of which it is part. Perhaps it is only on an occasion such as the recent University birthday celebration that one can feel a very real relationship with the great group of schools that constitutes Columbia. We have an idea certainly that those who shared in the October Anniversary celebration, and especially those who were able to attend the University Convocation at the close of the two week celebration period, knew a satisfaction as members of Barnard that was more than pride in a college.

Barnard's special contribution to the Anniversary was the exhibit on the third floor of Barnard Hall showing the growth of educational opportunities for women in the University. A pleasant recognition of Barnard's part in this growth was the awarding by the University of honorary degrees for distinguished scholarship and service to members of the Barnard Faculty. Miss Gildersleeve received the degree of Doctor of Letters, Professor Baldwin, Professor Brewster, Professor Knapp and Professor MacIver received the degree of Doctor of Letters, and Professor Crampton received the degree of Doctor of Science.

Through its alumnae committee, through Dean Gildersleeve, who as head of the New York College, presided, and through a large number of alumnae guests, Barnard shared in the New York dinner of the Alumnae Committee of Seven Colleges at the Hotel Astor, November thirteenth. The Honorable Charles Evans Hughes was the chief speaker of the evening, and made a plea for the same consideration from the country for women's colleges that has been given in such generous measure to men's colleges; President Comstock of Radcliffe made the main address for the colleges; and each of the college presidents spoke for three minutes on some phase of the financial problem that faces the women's colleges. The speeches were broadcast by radio, and sound pictures of the presidents, Mrs. Owen D. Young, who was chairman of the dinner committee, and Mr. Hughes, were distributed nationally by Paramount Sound News, the week following the dinner.

Our Alumnae Council, headed by Ellinor Reiley Endicott, '00, is cooperating with the Committee of Seven Colleges, and has come back from a busy summer with two splendid publicity projects.

The attractive picture on the opposite page is one of six views of undergraduate life that have been reproduced in sepia on correspondence cards, and can be had in sets with envelopes, for thirty cents, through Alumnae Office or through the Barnard College clubs. Really artistic in workmanship, these cards can be used in a number of ways,—as post cards, bridge tallies, dinner cards, calendars,—to “broadcast Barnard” so that a wider and more varied public may know that Barnard, a woman’s college in New York City, offers attractive surroundings, fine buildings, athletic activities, and a campus social life, as well as unparalleled cultural opportunities to its students.

An order now will bring you a set for holiday use, and will help start at once our campaign to tell the world what it ought to know about one of the women’s colleges.

Almost more satisfying than the post cards is the news that in the Spring the Columbia University Press will publish a volume of Greek Games lyrics containing all the serious lyrics that the committee has been able to collect from old programs, mortarboards, and obliging alumnae. The book will have illustrations from Greek Games pictures, an introduction by Dean Gildersleeve, an appreciation by John Erskine, and a Greek poem by Professor Perry, and if the committee’s plans work out, will cost about two dollars. If there is any one thing which belongs especially to Barnard it is Greek Games, and we rejoice that a permanent record of this kind is being made available through the work of the Alumnae Council, to show to a bigger public some of the really fine creative work that Barnard student life has inspired.

It need hardly be said that the work involved in undertakings of this sort is tremendous and that the Alumnae Association owes an enormous debt to Mrs. Endicott, and to Helen Erskine, ’04, and Elsa Herzfeld Naumburg, ’03, who have been responsible for the Greek Games book and the post cards.

The College Woman—Spendthrift, or Intelligent Investor?

By HELEN KENNEDY STEVENS

Several weeks ago a group of friends were discussing the question of money—not how to get it, but what to do with it after you had earned it. One of your editors was in the group and after listening to the conflicting opinions expressed, asked that I write the gist of it in the Alumnæ Magazine.

This explains why I, an amateur in the field of investment, have made this mild research, and cheerfully give you the results.

Before writing the article, I thought that it would be well to get opinions of several of my co-workers and the general attitude of the salaried woman toward a program of saving and investment, so I approached one of my classmates with the query:

“Now that you have been out of college a few years and are drawing a fair salary, what do you think about the relative merits of saving for your old age versus spending as you go?”

“The Old Ladies’ Home isn’t such a bad place,” said my first victim, “and I figure that after sixty-five the things that will count most will be memories. I am collecting those memories now. I find it fairly expensive, lots of fun and thoroughly exhausting, but they will come in well in the long days when fussing about the food and the draughts has become monotonous. Having money for pretty clothes and traveling about won’t be important then, but what will matter will be that you did dance and have attractive clothes and did have the trips and the good times when they were important—but, quite seriously, I have never worked out any saving or investment program. I have always earned a good salary and have spent it. I don’t know a thing about insurance or investment or anything that goes with it.”

Continuing my questioning of friends and acquaintances, I found more often than not that the girls who had been out of college from ten to fifteen years, instead of having accumulated anything toward an estate regarded the whole field of investment as a closed book and a mystery. Most of them carry some small insurance, but beyond that they have no definite program. From one college friend who is a happy person, thoroughly enjoying her job, and more than usually successful, I had the confession that in the twelve years since she had graduated from college she had saved nothing and that each year when she had come back from her summer vacation she had to borrow money from her parents to carry her through until her first salary check was paid.

Miss Katharine Doty, who keeps an eye on all of us, told me when I talked the matter over with her, that it surprised her to find out how often alumnae coming to her for jobs had no cash reserve to carry them through a period of unemployment, and frequently had to take the first job that came along rather than wait four or five months for the thing they really wanted.

In the pursuit of my quest, I developed an enormous curiosity about other people's money matters. Among my casual acquaintances, I discovered one who had worked out a real program of saving. Very soon after she had left college she had inherited some property and undertook to increase that amount until she could be sure of an income of $2,500-$3,000 a year. She did this by putting aside a fixed amount from her salary each month with which she could speculate, and by reinvesting the dividends from the property without ever risking her principal. When I knew her she had been out of college fifteen years and had almost reached her goal and had doubled her original capital. I think that she had thoroughly enjoyed playing with money. She had followed all of her investments carefully and had used exceedingly good judgment in taking advice.

This encouraged me and I set about interviewing some of the people who give advice. "What do you think of the salaried woman's attitude toward the investing of money?" I asked the head of the women's department in one of our big metropolitan banks.

She smiled. "You don't know what a queer lot about money you trained women workers are. You are intelligent, capable, self-reliant and successful on your jobs, but you do seem in general to have a blind spot when it comes to dealing in matters of finance, in planning your own economics. It is the unusual thing for the salaried woman to have any definite plan of investment which she follows consistently. On the other hand it is surprising the number of women who come to me to help them with their income tax, who on small salaries are taking care of an aged or invalid member of the family, trying to save to educate a younger brother or sister, or supplement a very small amount of family capital. Often they suddenly want more money and without good advice on a so-called 'tip,' risk that capital in speculation and without once counting up what it would mean in years of saving to accumulate it themselves."

Some time later, I interviewed one of the officers of my own bank who handles the buying and selling of securities for the clientele of the bank. "Do most of the women depositors know how to get service from the bank?" I asked him.

"Most of the women depositors demand service of the bank but do not make an intelligent use of the bank's resources and have very little idea of what a bank can be expected to do for them," he replied. "It is amazing the number of teachers, secretaries and other professional women who come into contact with this bank only when they deposit their salary checks and struggle with their bank statements the first of the month. If they need to borrow money they do not have the first idea how to proceed nor would it occur to them to come to the bank for advice on an investment program."

When the stock market crashed last month it was very interesting to hear what a complete maze it was to most of the women with whom I talked. Out of a group of five successful executives in responsible positions there was only one who really understood how one could lose money on a margin account. There was, of course, a very easy way for the rest of them to find out! Their protection was that they did not know how to open such an account.

One of the most constructive interviews I had was with the executive of a large and well-known bonding house. His advice to the salaried woman was first to budget her salary and decide how much she could put aside for investment saving each month, rather than to go through each month and save only what was left in the bank account after all the bills were paid. The field of investment open to women he classified roughly as the purchase of common and preferred stock; the purchase of bonds—industrial, public utility, government, real estate, etc.; insurance in all its forms; the purchase of real estate; partnership in a business enterprise. In these two latter fields no general advice could be given since each case would be an individual proceeding.

Your editor in asking me to write this article suggested that I outline a definite plan of saving as a guide to those who have not yet formulated their plan; but this is impossible for one outside the financial field. All I can do is to give the sources to go to for this information, and outline my own experience.

Practically all the big banks have departments for women and are willing and glad to advise you on a whole finance program. The smaller banks in our suburban towns usually have one or more of the officers of the staff ready not only to talk over your problems, but well informed and interested in helping you carry out a program of saving and investment. All the life insurance companies have special policies for business and salaried women with provision for income during illness and provision for income later on in life when earning has ceased, as well as "straight life" insurance which is a provision for your dependents. In spite of the fact that at the present time the majority of brokerage houses do not encourage margin accounts for women, the larger houses have special facilities for handling women's accounts and advising them in the outright purchase of securities.

Some years ago I put aside a fixed amount that I could speculate with and opened a margin account. That margin account has supplied me with numerous trips, several prolonged vacations, a fur coat and the family Christmas presents each year. I have never added to the original amount and have looked upon it just as I would a gambling purse for the races. I have gotten a great kick out of my losses as well as my gains and although the recent stock market crash has pretty well wiped out that account, it really owed me very little.

I carry accident and life insurance in amounts which I consider sufficient to meet my requirements. In addition to this I keep myself in debt to the bank with secured notes up to the limit of what I can carry. I do this by borrowing from the bank the money to purchase bonds and gilt-edged securities. The bank keeps these as collateral against my notes and the dividends from the securities pay the interest on the money that I have borrowed. The first of each month I make a payment of a definite amount to apply against these notes and as soon as I have reduced the amount of one note, I purchase additional securities and sign another note. In this way my savings are working for me while I accumulate them. This might not be a possible or practical plan for someone else, but it has worked out very satisfactorily for me.

I have thoroughly enjoyed working out my own program and while I never expect to accumulate any vast sum, I am busy and interested and feel that the old trick of eating your cake and having it too can be done—if you know how!

Notes from the Office of Dean Gildersleeve

Professor Grace A. Hubbard died on September 21st to the great sorrow of all her associates in Barnard College. Miss Hubbard was a graduate of Smith College, where she taught in the Department of English for fourteen years before she came to Barnard. Her graduate study she did at Cornell University. Beginning in 1907 she was adjunct and associate professor of English here until her retirement about three years ago. Though handicapped by poor health, she was an extraordinarily successful and stimulating teacher. Many of her former students will remember her great gift for making young people think for themselves and love literature. Her courses in Victorian Literature and in literary criticism were among the most famous in the College. She served on many important Faculty committees and represented Barnard on the University Council. Her wisdom and her vision contributed much to the forming of policies of the college.

Professor Charlotte Bühler of the University of Vienna, a distinguished psychologist, is at Barnard as Visiting Lecturer in Psychology for the first term. She is giving two courses, one of a general nature on Child Psychology, which is her specialty, and the other for more advanced students on Twentieth Century Psychology in Europe. These courses are largely attended, not only by Barnard undergraduates, but by students from Teachers College and the Graduate School, and Dr. Bühler is proving to be a very stimulating as well as charming member of the college community.

During the second term Miss Eileen Power, M.A. Cantab. D. Litt., Lecturer in Economic History in the London School of Economics of the University of London, will be Visiting Lecturer in History and will give two courses, one on Medieval History, Twelfth to Fourteenth Centuries inclusive, and the other for more advanced students on Life in the Middle Ages. Miss Power is a brilliant and well known scholar in her special field of Economic History. She is the author of "Medieval People," "Medieval Nunneries," and "The Good Man of Paris." She is at present traveling in China.

It is our custom to have such visiting lecturers occupy the guest suite in Hewitt Hall and it is a great privilege for our resident students to have the chance of knowing them.

Several Barnard graduates have received appointments to the teaching staff for next year. Miss Louise M. Rosenblatt, of the Class of 1925, who has been working at the University of Paris for her doctor's degree, is an Instructor in English; Miss Anna Anastasi, of the Class of 1928, Duror Fellow last year, is Lecturer in Psychology; and Miss Marian H. Churchill and Miss Helen Pallister, of the Class of 1929, are Assistants in Government and Psychology, respectively. During the absence on leave of Professor Riccio, Miss Teresa Carbonara, of the Class of 1920, is serving as Lecturer in Italian and carrying on most of his work.

One of the international fellowships established by the undergraduates has been awarded for this year to Miss Julie Averkiyeva from Russia. The fellowship offered to the Federation of University Women in India has unfortunately not been filled for this year, but it is hoped that an Indian student will come next year. One of the regular college scholarships has been given to Miss Hildegarde Andersen of Berlin, who comes to us through the German-American Exchange Committee.

The alumnae have been very zealous in helping the College during the past year. The Barnard Shopping Week organized by them at Lord and Taylor's last autumn, netted $6,279 for our General Endowment Fund. The loyal Class of 1904 on Commencement Day presented as its twenty-fifth anniversary gift $4,500, also for General Endowment, and the Class of 1919 as its decennial gift gave $5,000 for the endowment of a room in Hewitt Hall. We have also received an individual gift of $1,000 for endowment from Miss Renée Baruch of the Class of 1926.

A very welcome gift to the College was made last spring by Mr. and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, who contributed $10,000 to establish the James Lees Laidlaw Fund, the income of which is to be used to promote international understanding by bringing to the college lecturers and professors from abroad.

The following resolution, adopted by the Board of Directors of the Associate Alumnae at its October meeting, expresses the sorrow that all of Miss Hubbard's former students will feel at the news of her death on September 21st, after a long period of ill health:

WHEREAS in the death of Miss Grace Hubbard we have suffered the loss of a friend and an associate of high distinction: and

WHEREAS Miss Hubbard was a successful and inspiring teacher and a leader in the department of English: and

WHEREAS her interest in the undergraduates and graduates of Barnard College expressed itself in valuable service:

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that we, the Board of Directors representing the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College, express our deep sorrow and record our respect to her memory: and

BE IT ALSO RESOLVED that this resolution be spread on the minutes of this meeting, and a copy sent to the members of Miss Hubbard's family.

"On the Heights of Morningside"

By BEATRICE SAQUI

Member of the Class of 1932

Barnard's share in the recent celebration of Columbia's 175th anniversary might be termed a "Case History", for the third floor of Barnard Hall was lined with cases depicting the history of "Women in Education". Original documents, pictures and statistics graphically traced this development up to the present when women now outnumber men in the University.

How times have changed! The Freshmen have put the upper-classmen to shame. Sophomores, Juniors—and even Seniors, must all bow before 1933—and its haemoglobin. (Note—a haemoglobin is that which makes Dr. Alsop look at you either with admiration or pity. As far as we can make out, it is an internal rouge pot making cheeks red and vitality grand.) Anyhow, at least 50 per cent. of the Freshmen have haemoglobins over 90, and according to Dr. Alsop, it's all due to the summer's sun tan fad. Who says the sun shines alike on all mankind?

Innovations are coming thick and fast these days. As a Thanksgiving surprise, Barnard Bulletin appeared in a new guise. Instead of the old four-column page, there are now five columns. This additional room gives space for many new features, among which will be a series of interviews with alumnae who "have arrived" and are doing interesting work.

All during the week, and especially on Tuesdays between 1:10 and 2:10, girlish voices may be heard throughout Barnard soulfully singing, "Three Blind Mice—See How They Run",

"Loch Lomond", or some such strains. Undergrads have been expressing themselves in intermittent "Song Assemblies" conducted by Professor Moore. New song books have been procured, and several assembly hours have been given over to choral and round singing. Uninhibited, the songsters call out their favorites and sing them.

Undergrads have a habit of getting ravenous around 4 P.M., and if there is no College Tea to alleviate the pangs of hunger, the undergrads in the past have either borne their load of emptiness in martyr-like silence, or dashed to the drug store for a soda. Now, however, afternoon tea is served daily in the Faculty lunch room where gaily colored tables, trays and dishes make the new tea room very attractive.

This seems to be a year for taking old traditions and precedents and renovating them. The Sophomore class seems to be doing a lot of this alteration. Chief among the innovations is the vote to end all hazing at Barnard, and to make Mysteries a dignified affair at which the Freshmen will be formally welcomed to the College. No longer will Broadway be treated to sights of Freshmen wandering around with hair ribbons, etc.

Another decided change will occur in the 1930 Greek Games when the entrance will be a combined procession of the two classes, rather than separate entrances. It is felt that this will lend greater unity to the spectacle.

“Lost” Alumnae

In the spring another issue of the Alumnae Register will be published. Those alumnae who have not yet returned the questionnaire which was sent to them from Miss Doty's office are urged to do so as promptly as possible.

Moreover, we should like this edition of the Register to contain statistics on every Barnard alumna, so will you not help us if you can, by sending to the Alumnae Office, the addresses of, or any information which may aid us in locating, the alumnae whose names appear on the list printed below?

Notices

John Erskine to Speak at Alumnae Luncheon

With John Erskine as guest of honor, and a list of speakers including Dean Gildersleeve, Dr. Charlotte Buhler, visiting lecturer in Psychology, Dr. Howard L. McBain of Columbia, and Sarah Schuyler Butler, class of '15, Alumnae Luncheon, Saturday, January 18th, takes an unusually attractive place on this year's calendar. Invitations will be mailed from Alumnae Office shortly.

Alumnae Day

Wednesday, February 12

As a new experiment in Alumnae Day entertainment, the committee in charge of the Lincoln's Birthday reunion has asked Professor Douglas Moore, head of the new Department of Music at college, to discuss the work of his department, and to present the college Glee Club in several numbers.

The committee has received word from Helen Gahan, former Barnard student and well known singer that she will appear on the program, if she is not out of the city on tour, and it is hoped that Dr. Eileen Power, visiting lecturer from England for the Spring Session, will be guest speaker.

Tickets for Greek Games

Greek Games will be held in the Gymnasium, Barnard Hall, on Saturday afternoon, April 12, at three o'clock.

Only 75 tickets will be available for alumnae. Owing to the increasing number of the alumnae, it has been found necessary to limit the privilege of purchasing tickets to members of the Associate Alumnae only. The subscription price for tickets is $1.50 each, and only one ticket may be purchased by a member. This must be applied for over her own signature, and should be used by the member herself.

Written application, accompanied by remittance (checks payable to Greek Games Committee) and a self-addressed stamped envelope, may be sent to the Alumnae Office, Barnard College, 3009 Broadway, New York, between March 10th and 14th. Applications will be filled in order of receipt. Any received before March 10th will be returned.

A Gift to the Associate Alumnae

We are deeply indebted to Mr. Philip D. Brett, who died recently at his home in this city, for his generous and kindly thought in bequeathing $500 to the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College. This legacy is a touching proof of Mr. Brett's interest in the work, for the college and for the alumnae, to which his daughter, Alice Brett, of the Class of 1915, devoted so much time and energy. She was the first chairman of the Alumnae Endowment Fund Committee, and it was to her untiring efforts and unflinching persistence in the face of many discouragements, that the creation of that fund was very largely due. She literally wore herself out in the service of Barnard College, and her strength was not great enough to resist the illness which caused her premature death in 1924, and brought her work to sudden and tragic close. Her father's bequest is a beautiful and fitting tribute to her memory, and to the service which she so unselfishly rendered to us all.

Barnard Camp

This year, through the generosity of the Girl Scouts, the Barnard Camp is at "The Lodge" of Camp Andre, Briarcliff, New York. The house is a big, comfortable building, with a seemingly unlimited number of beds and blankets, and a roomy kitchen where our familiar blue enamel dishes look very much at home. There is a brook nearby, a little lake on which in warmer weather we can paddle and row, and here and there, approached by winding paths over the hills, are outdoor fireplaces which can handle any kind of a dinner one may choose to cook over an open fire.

The undergraduates are making use of the week-ends at the Lodge with great enthusiasm, and alumnae will enjoy it just as much. Alumnae may be invited on a private week-end if ten undergraduates are going, and if any graduates wish to go on an open week-end, they may do so by consulting Miss Holland, Room 208, Barnard Hall. Moreover, one week-end in the spring semester is being reserved for any group of ten alumnae who apply to Miss Holland immediately.

The procedure still is to take the train to Ossining and go to the camp in a Rigny taxi. A charge of $1.00 for each Alumnae is made for cleaning services.

Club Notes

Barnard College Club of New York

The New York Club is embarking on the fourth year of its existence. During this past year in its comparatively new quarters at the Barbizon, 140 East 63rd Street, the membership has increased considerably and an even greater interest in the Club has been felt.

Some of the more important Club activities include a series of dinners of varied interests. One was a special Barnard dinner given in December, at which Dean Gildersleeve presided and some of our most distinguished alumnae entertained with short talks regarding their own careers. The ever popular annual Dinner Dance was held in November at Villa Vallee, attracting an attendance just double that of preceding years. In conjunction with the Club Exchange, inaugurated this year, the Club held a Christmas sale for the convenience of its members. From November 25 until December 14th a section of the Club rooms was turned into an attractive gift shop where numerous useful and appropriate articles were sold for gifts at very moderate prices. The usual teas, bridge parties, lectures and annual Luncheon will take place, besides other interesting activities to be planned later.

The Club wishes to announce again that it offers an attractive place for class reunions, meetings, dinners, etc., and is pleased to have the Club used for such purposes.

All inquiries should be directed to the Executive Secretary.

The officers for the fiscal year 1929-1930 are:

President, Mrs. John Miles Thompson (Adele Alfke) 1919; Vice-President, Miss Margaret Snyder, 1918; Secretary, Miss Clelia Adams, 1925; Treasurer, Mrs. Hugo H. Hayman (Edwina Levy), 1905.

Buffalo

The Barnard College Club of Buffalo announces the following new officers, President, Mrs. Karl Kranz (Gladys Edwards '22); Secretary, Mrs. Ralph O. Sens (Leolyn Smith '19). This club of eight enthusiastic workers have bound themselves to no small undertaking. They have been instrumental in sending to Barnard a Buffalo girl, selected for qualifications of scholarship and personality. The dormitory fees for this girl, now a Junior, are paid by the club, and the money is raised through card parties, the selling of nuts and candy and by personal donations. The members find that their interest in college affairs has increased tremendously with the knowledge that they are sponsoring an undergraduate on Morningside Heights.

Los Angeles

The Barnard College Club of Los Angeles is continuing with its plans to arouse popular interest in Barnard. Their program for the year includes the placing of pictures and articles of interest in the local preparatory schools, accompanying them, when possible, with informal explanatory talks. They have already obtained lists of girls interested in coming east to college, and have arranged that these girls receive information about the particular benefits of Barnard. The officers of the club for the coming year are President, Mrs. Spalding; Vice-President, Mrs. Whitewell; Treasurer, Mrs. Ritter; Secretary, Mrs. Koldehobe.

Montclair

The first meeting of the Barnard College Club of Montclair was held on November 22 at the home of its President, Mrs. J. V. Skinner. The new Barnard Postal Cards have been taken for sale and great interest was shown in the Barnard Publicity campaign.

Mount Vernon

The Barnard Club of Mount Vernon held its first meeting of the year on November first at the home of the President, Mrs. L. Brewster Smith. Plans for purely social meetings were discussed. The Prize contest in Extemporaneous Speaking held each spring at the Mount Vernon High School under the auspices of the Barnard Alumnae took place, as usual May 22, 1929. The Judges were Mrs. John Bates, Mrs. Harold Storms, and Mrs. L. Brewster Smith. Miss Frances Marlatt presented the prizes, Ten Dollars for the winner, and Five Dollars for the Second Prize.

Obituary

1894

Ella Fitzgerald Bryson died in Paris, France, after prolonged illness abroad. Mrs. Bryson was President of the Alumnae Association from 1896 to 1900 and continued her great interest by being the first Alumnae Trustee, 1903 to 1907. She was the first advisor to women graduate students, from 1901 to 1902. During the war she was very active in Red Cross and War Relief Work.

1904

Hilma Leers died at Hawthorne, New Jersey, in September, 1929. From 1913 until the time of her death she had been an instructor in the Newark High Schools.

1919

Katherine Harrower Peters died on January 9, 1929, of pneumonia following influenza. During her college career, she was closely associated with the class of 1917, of which she was really a member. Because of her marriage to Frazier F. Peters in 1917 she did not receive her degree until 1919. As an undergraduate, she was active in Greek Games, writing the lyrics both years, in Dramatics, managing, producing and acting, and in Publications as a member of the Barnard Bear staff. After her graduation, she was active in war work, and continued her interest in literature. One of her poems was included in an anthology of verse which published the work of promising writers of various colleges. She had three children, two girls and one boy.

In 1926, she received a divorce from Frazier F. Peters and in December, 1928, she married Hugh Lofting, the author of "Doctor Doolittle."

1925

Phoebe Sherman died on May 14, 1929, at sea, after overtaxing her strength by her tireless work in her chosen field, Chemistry. After her college career, she was appointed graduate assistant in Chemistry at Iowa State College, which involved teaching General Chemistry in which she was much interested. In addition to this teaching, which gave her a reputation for unusual devotion and success, Phoebe took graduate courses in Chemistry and Bacteriology and in 1926-27, she began research work upon the enzymes of certain microorganisms. The combination of advanced courses, teaching and research overtaxed her strength, and although she spent the summer of '27, resting and traveling, she suffered a nervous breakdown that fall and was under medical care the rest of the year. In 1928, she entered Yale, specializing in Organic Chemistry, following an early interest inspired by Professor Reimer. She was forced to stop her work soon however, and again tried to recover her strength by traveling leisurely in Europe with her mother. Her efforts to regain her strength were futile, however, in the face of a baffling nervous trouble, and she died in her sleep, the fourth night at sea, on her return voyage.
